ENCOUNTER

- PCAN hosts Person-centred encounter groups. While participants do not need formal training in the Person-Centred Approach, understanding the approach would be helpful, and everyone is expected to follow person-centred principles. PCAN groups are self-facilitated. All participants share equal responsibility for facilitating the group. No one is required to speak, and everyone chooses for themselves how much they want to share.

This means that participants:

- Treat each other thoughtfully and with respect.
- Are responsible for themselves
- Listen with empathic understanding, rather than immediately formulating a response.
- Hold one another in a positive light and to try to see things from the other person's perspective.
- Are considerate, careful, and honest in what they say about each other, both when they are together and when we're not.
